Your baby's life shouldn't begin with detox

A baby's health depends on the mother's health.

Talk to a medical professional about all medications you are taking, including prescription pain pills, to protect your baby from Neonatal Abstinence Syndrome.
